Planning ahead can ease the burden of a critical illness

Unexpected health problems can throw your plans and goals off track. Getting sick can be expensive and not all bills will be covered by provincial health plans.

Medical advancements mean more people survive illnesses – like cancer and stroke – than ever before, but recovery can be long and difficult.

You can take steps now to help protect your family's lifestyle and savings if you get sick later. If you're faced with a serious illness and you have a plan, you can focus on your recovery and worry less about money.

1 in 2 men and 1 in 2.2 women in Canada will develop cancer in their lifetime¹

Every year, there are 70,000 heart attacks² in Canada and more than 62,000 strokes⁴

The good news is more people are surviving illnesses than ever before:

of Canadians diagnosed with cancer are expected to survive¹

of Canadians who have a heart attack (and are hospitalized) survive³

of Canadians who have a stroke (and are hospitalized) survive²

Freedom to focus on recovery

A critical illness doesn't have to derail your financial security plans and goals. If you're diagnosed with a serious health event covered by your policy, critical illness insurance is an option that gives you a one-time payment you can use however you want. You'll have the flexibility to help keep your finances on track so you can focus on recovery.

You might use the money to:

Supplement lost wages because of time away from work (for you or your spouse)

Manage everyday costs (mortgage, food, vehicle costs, etc.)

Access private or out-of-country medical treatment

Enroll your children in activities and pay for childcare

Cover your business' operating expenses

Coverage as unique as you are

Personalize your critical illness coverage

You and your situation are unique. Your advisor can tailor your critical illness coverage to help meet your unique needs.

Get your money back if you don't make a claim

With the return-of-premium option, if you aren't diagnosed with a critical illness, you can end your coverage and get back up to 100% of your premium payments.

Depending on what you choose, you can get money back:

- At year 15, year 20 or age 65
- At expiry
- At death
- With a partial withdrawal – if you need less coverage in the future, you can reduce your benefit amount and get money back for the coverage you've ended.
- With the paid-up option with lifetime coverage – instead of getting money back, use the money from your return-of-premium option to pay for future policy payments.

Don't pay if you become disabled

With the disability waiver-of-premium option, we'll cover your critical illness insurance payments for up to two years if you become disabled.

Continue your coverage even after a critical illness

With most critical illness insurance plans, your coverage ends if you make a claim on your policy and receive your one-time payment.

With the second event option, part of your coverage can stay in place in certain circumstances related to the conditions of heart attack, stroke and life-threatening cancer.

Broaden your coverage

With the loss of independent existence option, you get the one-time payment if you can't perform at least two of six activities of daily living (like bathing, dressing or feeding). To claim the payment, you'd have to be unable to perform the activities for at least 90 days with no reasonable chance of recovery.

Keeping your plans on track

We can help you stay on track financially even if the unexpected happens. If you have a serious health event, worrying about your finances is stress you don't need. LifeAdvance critical illness insurance from Canada Life can provide financial support through a one-time payment with the freedom to use that money however you'd like so you can focus on you and your family.
